State Taxes.

The State Board of Equalization completed its work Tuesday. The result of their work shows an increase of $161,416 in taxes over the amount of revenue of last year on the same class of property. The total equalized value of the property as shown by the report is a total of $744,439,090 upon which the State will collect $3,222,445.25.

The assessed value as reported to the board was $631,147,856. This was increased by the board $13,340,234, increasing the amount of taxes $66,701.22; and is an increase over the taxes collected last year of $33,724.43.

This year the National banks were assessed by the Board of Valuation and Assessment, paying a revenue of $102,259.53; last year this class of property was assessed by the Board of Equalization.

The equalized value of farm land as shown by the report is $280,709,836 an increase of $10,477,177, an average value per acre of $11.70. The equalized value of town lots is $213,221,178, an increase of $618,587. The equalized value of personality is $34,672,454, and increase over the county assessment of $2,244,470.

Bridges assessed this year by the Board of Valuation and Assessment, which were last year assessed by the Board of Equalization, paid in taxes $20,432.27. It will be seen that from the same class of property assessed last year the revenue of the State from these classes of tangible property is increased $161,416.53.

Montgomery county will have to pay into the State Treasury under the report of the State Board of Equalization, the sum of $28,284.53.

OFFENSIVE CATARRH

I suffered for a long time with a bad case of Catarrh and had a great deal of medicine without any benefit. I had a continual headache, my cheeks had grown purple, my nose was always stopped up, my breath had a sickening and disgusting odor, and I coughed incessantly. I heard of your S. S. S. and wrote you. I commenced to use it, and after taking several bottles I was cured and have never since had the slightest symptom of the disease. MISS MARY L. SPURGEON, Cor. 7th & Felix Sts., St. Joseph, Mo.

Wheeling, W. Va., May 29, 1903. I had Nasal Catarrh for years for which I used S. S. S. with very gratifying results. I tried local applications for some time, and getting no permanent relief I came to the conclusion that the seat of the trouble was in the blood. Knowing S. S. S. to be a good blood medicine I began its use, and after using it for some little while it did away entirely with the offensive mucus in the nostrils, and I did not have to hawk and spit, especially in the morning, to dislodge the catarrhal matter. 1627 South St. FRED H. PRESSY.

The filthy secretions and foul mucus that are continually dropping back into the throat, find their way into the stomach and are absorbed into the blood. Catarrh then becomes constitutional, and the only way to get rid of it is through the blood. Write us if you have Catarrh, and our physicians will advise you without charge. The Manly Way.

Midway Clipper: A vote looking to a change of the State constitution from the secret ballot electoral franchise to the former open method of voting, will be taken next November. Attorney General N. B. Hays is a warm advocate of the return to the viva voce instead of the present so-called secret ballot. His motto is: "Be a man or a mouse." He contends that there can be but few secrets hedging in anything that concerns an election if one will take but slight pains to ascertain how any one votes, and he and many others want to get back to first principles, when white men voted as their conscience dictated, without any more fear of the consequence than they now have.

At Normandy, Spencer county, Ky., Chester Crawford, a young farmer, shot and instantly killed Lon Beard, a negro, who the night before attempted to assault Mrs. Crawford. Beard was being taken from Taylorsville to Shelbyville for safe-keeping and when the train stopped at Normandy Crawford stepped aboard and fired seven bullets into the negro's body. He at once surrendered to the Sheriff, and after the Coroner's verdict was rendered he was released on a bond of $1,000, signed by fifteen of the leading citizens of his neighborhood.

Don't think that eruption of yours can't be cured. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla—its virtue is power to cure.

The State Fair.

The big Kentucky State Fair, which will be held in Lexington, Sept. 18-23, will be a woman's fair as much as a man's fair. Secretary George A. Bain is going to make a special effort to interest the women in the Floral Hall and Home Department. There will be premiums offered for nearly every article that can be made with the needle. Among the articles already mentioned in the proposed catalogue that the women are interested in is a class of quilts and embroidered articles. Under this head will be silk patchwork, calico patchwork and worsted patchwork quilts, lunch cloth and napkins, embroidered doilies, center pieces, side board scarfs, cotton and silk; embroidered shirt waists, embroidered corset covers, runner cuffs and collars, embroidered picture frames, and flannel skirts, embroidered infant's afghans, embroidered sofa pillows, silk and cotton handkerchiefs, towels, pillow shams, tapestries in cross stitch, mountmellick embroidery, Queen Anne darning, scalloping, silk and cotton, specimens of outline, college pillows, rag carpets, etc.

The jury at Russellville in the assault case against John Sacra, after an hour's deliberation, rendered a verdict of guilty and fixed his punishment at death.

Ain't it funny what curious ideas about anatomy prevail in the press? It was stated the other day that a man was "shot in the ticket office." Another paper says a man was "shot in the suburbs." "He kissed her passionately upon her reappearance." She whipped him upon his return." He kissed her back." "Mr. Jones walked in upon her invitation." She seated herself upon his entering." She fainted upon his departure.—Frankfort Roundabout.

A Grim Tragedy

is daily enacted, in thousands of homes, as Death claims, in each one, another victim of Consumption or Pneumonia. But when Coughs and Colds are properly treated, the tragedy is averted. F. G. Huntley, of Oakland, Ind., writes: My wife had the consumption, and three doctors gave her up. Finally she took Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, which cured her, and today she is well and strong. It kills the germs of all diseases. One dose relieves. Guaranteed at 50c and $1.00 by W. S. Lloyd druggist. Trial bottle free.

"The prettiest woman and the best cooking in Taylor county," is the fitting preface to the statement that Martha Jane Ayers, at thirty-three years of age has been married nine times. That is a combination calculated to create a corner on the masculine matrimonial market.—Harrodsburg Democrat.

When the case of Commonwealth against Caleb Powers was called in the Scott Circuit Court Monday on motion of the Commonwealth's Attorney it was continued pending action in the United States Supreme Court. There is one rational way to treat nasal catarrh: the medicine is applied directly to the effected membrane. The remedy is Ely's Cream Balm. It restores the inflamed tissues to a healthy state without drying all the life out of them and it gives back the lost senses of taste and smell. The sufferer who is tired of vain experiments should use Cream Balm. Druggists sell it for 50 cts. Ely Bros, 56 Warren Street, New York, will mail it.

Governor of Alabama Commends Pe-ru-na.
In a letter dated July 26, 1890, written from Montgomery, Ala., Governor Joseph J. Johnston, says: "I join Congressman Brewer in commending Pe-ru-na."—Joseph J. Johnston.

ONE of the most wonderful events in the history of medicine is the multitude of endorsements which Pe-ru-na is receiving as a catarrh cure from men of national importance.

The most distinguished men of the United States have no hesitation in lending their influence to assist in letting the public know of the merits of Pe-ru-na.

Nearly one-half the people are in some way affected by catarrh. Therefore it is almost a national curse, and it is of national import that the people should know of Pe-ru-na.

Catarrh is an American disease.

Pe-ru-na is an American remedy.

Catarrh is a result of changeable climate. Pe-ru-na is a result of long and careful experimentation.

Catarrh enters the system through the nerve centers and affects the mucous membrane.

Pe-ru-na enables the nerve centers to repel and expel the catarrh from the system.

Catarrh is a systemic disease and curable only by systemic treatment.

The remedy that cures catarrh must aim directly at the depressed nerve centers. This is what Pe-ru-na does.

Redeemer of Public Moneys.

Hon. John C. Leftwich, Redeemer of Public Moneys, whose office is in the Postoffice Building, in a letter written from Montgomery, Ala., says: "I take pleasure in recommending Register United States Land Office.

Hon. Robert Barber, Register United States Land Office, writes from Montgomery, Ala.: "For some time I have been a sufferer from catarrh in its incipient stage, so much so that I became depressed and feared my health was generally in a decline. But hearing of Pe-ru-na as a good remedy I gave it a fair trial and began to improve. Its effects were distinctly beneficial, removing the annoying symptoms, and it was particularly good as a tonic."—Robert Barber.

Collector of Port.
Hon. J. K. Burke, Collector of Port, Mobile, Ala., writes: "Pe-ru-na I can recommend as a fine medicine. It has been used in my family and as a tonic it is excellent. I take pleasure in testifying to its fine qualities."—J. K. Burke.

Postmaster of Mobile.
Hon. P. D. Barker, Postmaster of Mobile, Ala., writes: "I have used Pe-ru-na for catarrh a short time and have also had several friends try it and they all pronounce it the best catarrh remedy ever put on the market. It can not be praised too highly."—L. J. Bryan.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Pe-ru-na, write at once to Dr. Hartman, President of the Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio, and he will give you the benefit of his valuable advice gratis. All correspondence strictly confidential.

THE CONGRESSIONAL RACE.

The next race for the Democratic nomination for Congress in this district is already being discussed. The candidates will be Hon. F. A. Hopkins, of Floyd county, the incumbent, Judge Jno. E. Cooper and Hon. H. B. Kincaid, of this city, Hons. Abram Henick and C. B. Hill, of Clark, and Finley E. Fogg, of Morgan.

The Kentucky County Attorneys' Association which has been in session at Crab Orchard this week passed resolutions before adjournment requesting the Legislature to strike out the words "at random" in Section 1308 of the statutes relating to shooting on the highway; also to decrease the number of jury challenges allowed the defendants in criminal cases, they being allowed fifteen under the present code to five for the Commonwealth.

The Republican State Central Committee has named Judge A. R. Burman, of Richmond, as the Republican member of the State Board of Election Commissioners.

The Mt. Sterling Sentinel-Democrat, one of the up-to-date weeklies of the State and a most excellent paper, came out last week with its usual size and on book paper, full of cuts of prominent business men and business enterprises, advertising that thriving city by well worded write-ups. It was a beauty.—Nicholas Advocate.

A handsome industrial edition of the Mt. Sterling Sentinel-Democrat is just out and shows a wide awake, progressive town, that is rapidly forging to the front. The editors should receive the co-operation of every citizen in the county in making it one to be proud of. The editors deserve much praise for the effort.—Danville Advocate.

Kentucky Life Insurance.

Commissioner of Insurance H. R. Prewitt has completed his annual report on business done in this State other than fire and marine. The report shows thirty-six legal reserve life companies engaged in business in this State. At the beginning of this year these companies had in force in this State 384,142 policies, insuring $214,519,258. They issued during the year $53,876,477. There was canceled $41,833,636, leaving in force $226,562,099. They received as premiums in Kentucky $7,318,536 and paid in losses $3,055,579.

The Commissioner, among recommendations to the General Assembly, says it should be made compulsory upon the companies wherein the policy-holder participates in surplus, to distribute a certain per cent. of surplus each year. He says the companies doing business in Kentucky should also be required to invest a certain per cent. of the net earnings in Kentucky securities to better protect the policy-holders of the State.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Judge J. Wise Hagins for County Judge, Breck Crawford for Sheriff, Thomas A. Hudson for County Clerk, S. S. Taulbee for Jailer, and Henry B. Noble for County Superintendent.

It is said that Hudson, who is on the Hargis ticket will resign therefrom to accept the nomination for the same place on the Fusion ticket.

Fight over Caleb Powers.

The Mayor and Policemen of Newport and the Jailer of Campbell county engaged in a fight over how Caleb Powers should be cared for in the Newport jail. The jailer wanted to place the prisoner in a special cell which Powers' friends had fitted with a cot, lace curtains and other things, for comfort to body and eye. The Mayor wanted him placed with the "common herd." In the fight Mayor Helmbold lost all his front teeth. The Jailer and his assistants were arrested by local officers, and the Mayor and Police by United States Marshals.

Life.

The poet's exclamation: "O Life! I feel thee bounding in my veins," is a joyous one. Persons that can rarely or never make it, in honesty to themselves, are among the most unfortunate. They do not live, but exist; for to live implies more than to be. To live is to be well and strong—to arise feeling equal to the ordinary duties of the day, and to retire not overcome by them—to feel life bounding in the veins. A medicine that has made thousands of people, men and women, well and strong, has accomplished a great work, bestowing the richest blessings, and that medicine is Hood's Sarsaparilla. The weak, run-down, or debilitated, from any cause, should not fail to take it. It builds up the whole system, changes existence into life, and makes life more abounding. We are glad to say these words in its favor to the readers of our columns.

HARD INSURANCE WORK.

How an Agent's Blunt Frankness Opened the Way to Big Order.

A clever insurance agent was closing a long campaign upon a wealthy merchant whom he wished to insure for $100,000. The merchant had been a "tough proposition," and the solicitor's arguments and eloquence dropped from him so ineffectively as to arouse all the professional pride of a dozen years' success. He redoubled his efforts and was at last just about to give up in disgust when the merchant swung around in his revolving chair and fixed him with a cold gray eye.

"Young man," said he, "if you can satisfy me on one point I'll take out this policy."

The agent braced himself, for the tone contradicted the encouragement of the words. "I guess I can," he remarked.

"Well, then," demanded the other in a high voice, pointing a big finger sternly at his visitor, "how much do you get out of this first $4,000 which I am to 'invest,' as you call it?"

"I've no objection personally to telling you," replied the insurance man uneasily, "but I've agreed not to give the exact figures."

"Is it half?"

"Yes. More than that."

"More than half! And will you kindly inform me why I should pay you more than $2,000? Do I get anything from it? What reason is there for such an absurdity?" He was angry, insulting, triumphant.

The agent rose. He felt his chance was gone and decided that he had earned the luxury of a little plain speech.

"Well, I'll tell you. I've been here twelve times, haven't I?"

"I can well believe it," replied the other, rather brutally.

"And I've spent hours and days you know nothing about finding out all about you and your affairs and laying out my facts so that they'd appeal to you."

"Well?"

"Well, if the world wasn't full of obstinate idiots like you, who have to have a good thing hammered clear through their skulls before they recognize it, my company wouldn't need to employ and pay men of intelligence like me."

It is said that this venturesome person left that office with the signature for which he had striven so hard. In any case, he expressed a truth which impresses one as soon as he begins to investigate insurance conditions. If people who ought to be insured would all go to the insurance companies instead of having to be fairly clubbed in, one of the largest expenses would be eliminated, with the obvious result of lower rates or larger dividends to policy holders.—World's Work.

Louis Philippe and Soult.

Louis Philippe knew that Marshal Soult clung to power, and that his fall would be bitter to him. But when the time came the future ministers, with Thiers at their head, were assembled at the Tuileries, while in the next room Louis Philippe broke the news to Soult. The interview took a long time, and the new ministers were not without some apprehension. Finally the door was opened just enough to allow the king's queer pear shaped head to pass, and he whispered: "A little patience, gentlemen. Just a little patience—we are weeping together."

Some Flower Names.

Who could guess that the dandelion was the "dent-de-lion," or lion's tooth; the tulip so called because it looks like a turban, and tulip was another name for turban? The beautiful gladiolus is a sword lily—"gladiolus" in Latin means "a little sword." It is so called from the shape of its leaves. The asphodel is from the Greek word, meaning "king's spear." The name daffodil comes from "asphodel," and so means the same thing.—St. Nicholas.

In 1851 in company with John Tipton and Tilford Hines he left here for Texas, and only visited his old home once since that time, in 1858.

He was a soldier under Gen. Pillow and served valiantly through the war as an officer in the Confederate army.

Mrs. Mary Lindsey Fite, wife of Rev. W. Arthur Fite, of Palmyra, Mo., died at the home of her father Mr. Charles H. Jones, in this county, Monday, July 10, 1905, of pulmonary trouble, aged about 21 years.

Funeral services, conducted by Rev. C. J. Armstrong, of Winchester, assisted by Rev's. Bourland and McKissick, were held at the Somerset Christian Church Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock and burial in Machpelah cemetery.

Everything possible was done to stay the ravages of the dread disease and prolong the life of this lovely young woman, but without avail. After going to Texas and Arizona in a vain attempt to regain her health Mrs. Fite came home to spend her remaining days under the parental roof.

Hers was a beautiful christian character and her sad death will bring heartaches to a host of friends as well as to her family.

DUDLEY.

Mrs. N. S. Dudley, half sister of Mrs. J. H. E. Jephson, died at her home in Flemingsburg, aged 63 years.

CONROY.

Mrs. Joanna Conroy, of this city died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Floyd Burns, in Lexington, Sunday afternoon, July 9, 1905, aged about seventy-seven years. The remains were brought here Tuesday morning and after funeral services at St. Patrick's Catholic church, conducted by Rev. Father L. de Waeganaere, were laid to rest in St. Thomas' cemetery.

Early in life Mrs. Conroy joined the Catholic church and was ever true to her religion and its teachings.

Modest, gentle, patient, she won and held the love of all who knew her. Until failing health, caused by the infirmities of age, prevented her further ministrations, she was an angel of mercy and blessing in every stricken home in her neighborhood.

She was devoted to her children and it was a source of pride and pleasure to her to know that they were honored and respected in the communities in which they lived, but it would be difficult to say whether she loved her children more than they loved her.

She was the widow of the late John Conroy, and is survived by six children, Mrs. Lottie McCloy, of Louisville, Mrs. Floyd Burns, Mike Conroy and Miss Maggie Conroy, of Lexington, and Joe M. Conroy and John A. Conroy, of this city.

"ELM VALLEY"

The Scene of a Most Enjoyable Entertainment.

At his country home "Elm Valley" Thursday night, Mr. Tandy Chenault was the host at a beautiful and most enjoyable dance.

It was one of the handsomest and most delightful entertainments given in Montgomery county in several seasons and brought together about one hundred and fifty young ladies and gentlemen.

The Chenault home, which is an ideal one for such an entertainment was beautifully decorated. The two large front rooms with canvased floors were used for dancing, the orchestra being stationed at the foot of the steps in the hallway.

The guests were also entertained on the porch, which is large and spacious, beautiful and inviting. It was arranged with couches and decorated with ferns and palms and lighted with Japanese lanterns, and on the lawn and under the trees, which were hung with Japanese lanterns, where were placed chairs and hammocks.

At midnight delicious refreshments of ices and cakes was served.

Mr. Chenault was assisted in receiving his guests by his sisters, Mrs. Lan Corbin, of Georgetown, Ky., and Mrs. J. V. Kelly Jr., of Springfield, Ill., his mother, Mrs. Emma L. Chenault, his aunt, Mrs. Alice R. Turner and his cousin Miss Mary Bridgeforth.

At a late hour the guests departed after thanking the popular young host for the delightful evening spent at his hospitable home.

RELIGIOUS.

Dr. E. O. Guerrant will preach at Springfield church tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock.

The C. W. B. M. will have a cake sale at the Singer Sewing Machine office today.

The Union services will be held at the Southern Presbyterian church tomorrow evening at 7:45 o'clock with sermon by Rev. H. D. Clark.

Communion service at Springfield church tomorrow at 11 o'clock; Sabbath School at 10 o'clock.

The Sabbath School of the Baptist church enjoyed a picnic in Col. Johnson's woods Thursday.

Owing to the absence of Rev. Geo. A. Joplin, who will preach in Lexington tomorrow, there will be no preaching service in the First Presbyterian church, but Mr. L. T. Chiles, Superintendent, will be glad to see every member of the Sunday school present.

The people of Mt. Sterling are always glad to hear Rev. W. M. Forrest, and consider themselves fortunate in having the opportunity of listening to him on last Sunday night at the Union Service, when he presented "Christ, the Ideal Man," in a way that impressed both young and old.

Rev. Father L. deWaeganaere has been appointed pastor of St. Ann's church, Covington, Ky., and will resign his pastorate of St. Patrick's church, in this city, and accept the new charge. This will be an unwelcome news to Father deWaeganaere's congregation and to every citizen of our town who has come in contact with this lovable and high minded christian gentleman. He has been pastor of the church here for five or six years, during which time the membership of the church was greatly increased and his zeal and enthusiasm inspired his flock to work more earnestly, for the upbuilding of the church and the advancement of its tenets. Father de Waeganaere is a man of great learning, natural culture, attractive personality and very devout. His departure will be a loss to Mt. Sterling and a corresponding gain to Covington. While we regret to give him up we wish him all success in his new home.

A SIGN OF CONVALESCENCE.

Why a Doctor Was Sure His Fair Patient Was Better.

"You are feeling better today, Mrs. M.?" said the trained nurse after she had finished making her patient comfortable for the day.

"Yes, Miss S., I really feel as if I were going to get well," said the invalid, lying back on her pillows with comfortable fatigue. Then, after a pause, "I know I must be looking like a fright!"

The nurse smiled to herself. She knew the signs of convalescence in her feminine patients so well.

"May I have a hand glass?" was Mrs. M.'s next remark. It was the first time she had asked for a mirror since her illness, and she looked at herself critically. "Yes, there is no doubt about it," she said plaintively. "I look hideous!"

"I think you are very pretty," remarked Miss S.

"Oh, do you honestly? You are not joking?" exclaimed her charge, with animation. And then a moment after: "Miss S., may I have Marie in to crimp my hair? I should so like to look nice for Dr. B.," meaning the eminent specialist who had been attending her, together with the family physician. "You see," she continued, "he never has seen me looking decent. I didn't care how I looked when I was feeling so ill. I know he thinks I'm an ugly woman."

So the maid was called and the hair arranged to milady's satisfaction.

"And now, Marie," directed her mistress, "get me out one of my best valenciennes dressing jackets—one with blue ribbons, or, no, don't you think, Miss S., that the pink ribbons give one a little more color?" The pink was decided on, and then Mrs. M. ordered the pillow slips changed, and a pair which were beautifully embroidered replaced them.

Shortly afterward the doctors were announced, and the great specialist came into the room with his confrere. He looked surprised and then gave a quizzical look at the nurse.

"I am going to bid you goodbye, Mrs. M.," he said after a few formal questions.

"What do you mean, doctor?" queried the invalid.

He laughed. "When ribbons and crimps come into the sickroom," he answered, "my work is over. It is a sure sign that my services are no longer required."—New York Tribune.

Two Compliments.

A lecturer used to tell of two compliments he had received, each of which was, as he said, a "gem" in its way. One day a friend met him on the street and said cheerfully: "I see that you lectured last night. Sorry I wasn't able to be there. Hope to hear your lecture when it passes into literature." This was different from the tribute paid him by a young man who, with a grave face and businesslike air, stepped up to the lecturer one night as he left the platform, shook his hand solemnly and remarked, with the air of one making a dry statement of facts, "I merely wished to say that you are my favorite writer and speaker," after which he bowed and abruptly disappeared.

A Rival to the Fish.

"Talk about mosquitoes," said an American, "why, when we were in latitude 30 degrees and longitude 75 degrees a host of mosquitoes, settled on our rigging, and when they left us there wasn't a stitch of canvas left on the boat."

"Waal," said his friend, "that's strange, because when I was sailing in latitude 29 degrees and longitude 74 degrees a swarm of mosquitoes settled on our rigging, and every one of them had a pair of canvas breeches on. Same mosquitoes, no doubt!"—London Globe.

Could Take His Place.

There is a delicious story of a very vain officer who was helping to garrison Edinburgh castle when the Boer war was in its early days.

"You are ordered off for active service immediately!" exclaimed a strippling, rushing into the officer's establishment.

The pompous man, alert with excitement, was on his feet in an instant.

"Good heavens!" he burst out. "Has Roberts been killed already?"

The Fourteenth Guest

The door of the great white house in Park lane swung open furiously, and Mr. Parker Jones, M. P., clothed in the regulation uniform which society has allotted to men for evening wear, stood fitfully on the doorstep, sheltering himself from the rain beneath the classic portico.

The night was so unpleasant that the street was well nigh deserted, and it therefore happened that for several minutes the M. P. scanned the thoroughfare without espying a wayfarer. At length, however, a tall, well built young man ambled past the house.

He was shabbily dressed, but there was something in his bearing which proclaimed good breeding, and this was sufficient for Mr. Parker Jones, present and somewhat eccentric purpose.

"Hi! Hi!" he shouted. "Er—could you come up here for a moment?"

The young man stopped short and regarded him with amazed eyes.

"What do you want?" he asked in a well bred but surly tone.

"I want to speak to you."

The youth hesitated for a moment, and then swung himself into the doorway.

"Come in here out of the rain," muttered Mr. Parker Jones.

He led the way into a small smoking room at the rear of the house and then, surveying the young man, said abruptly:

"Aren't you disengaged this evening?"

The youth smiled bitterly.

"I wish you the truth," he replied, "I had an engagement with a certain young woman whom we must all meet some time."

"What time?" asked Mr. Parker Jones.

"Death," replied the youth, and his voice was so harsh that the M. P. leaped backward in terror.

"Dear, dear! How shocking!" murmured the M. P. "I presume you are—er—unfortunate?"

"I am starving. Haven't had a meal since yesterday."

Mr. Parker Jones rubbed his hands.

"Upon my word, this is most fortunate," he observed, "for my object in summoning you to my house was to invite you to dinner."

The youth stared.

"Dinner?" he echoed. "I have almost forgotten the meaning of the word."

"Then refresh your memory by making one of my wife's party this evening. I perceive that you are a gentleman and that you will do nothing to make me regret my somewhat unconventional invitation."

The youth smiled.

"I certainly don't eat my food like a savage, if that is what you mean," he replied. "But why on earth have you bestowed this honor upon me?"

"For the very best of reasons. My wife is the most superstitious person in London and absolutely refuses to sit down thirteen at table."

He then went on to explain that the fourteenth guest had been prevented from attending by reason of a domestic loss and that as there had been no time to hire a professional diner out he had been compelled to fall back upon the first likely person whom he had espied in Park lane.

"Well, this is a lucky accident for me," observed the young man, with a laugh, "and I can promise you that I shall do justice to your cook's achievements. But I can't sit down to dinner in these clothes."

"Of course not. Come to my room, and you shall have an evening suit of my son's, which he left behind when he went to Oxford. Your figure is—er—very similar to his, and the clothes will fit you fairly well."

Now, the M. P.'s behavior was certainly unusual, but he was in fear of his wife, and as that lady had announced her intention of abandoning the dinner party unless a fourteenth guest could be procured, Mr. Parker Jones had decided to do the first desperate deed that occurred to his inventive brain.

Hence did it come about that half an hour later Mr. Talbot Lake stood in the drawing room, garbed in snowy shirt and splendid clothes, chatting with his hostess as though he had lived in Park lane all his life and had never dined on sausage and mashed potatoes.

Mrs. Parker Jones was delighted and beamed upon the youth with great kindness, introduced him to pretty Maisie Hope and asked him to take that young lady down.

The dinner was good, and the talk was not more dull than usual, so that he enjoyed himself immensely. But there was a skeleton at the feast, and the skeleton was named Tomorrow. Tomorrow he must go back to the old life or seek release in the river. Tomorrow!

"How sad you look!" said Maisie of a sudden. "I suppose you are awfully bored. Tell me your thoughts," she said softly.

He smiled bitterly.

"I was thinking of those wonderful lines of Whittier," he made answer in a low voice which was not altogether firm, "the lines, Miss Hope, which proclaim that of all sad words of tongue or pen, the saddest are these—it might have been."

The girl regarded him with eyes which held unusual interest.

"Do you know," she observed in a reproachful tone, "do you know, Mr. Lake, that I think you are talking very wrongly?"

"Indeed!" he returned, with a smile.

"Yes, indeed I do! At your age there is no might have been. 'Shall be' ought to be your motto and nothing else."

He laughed bitterly.

"My whole life has been a failure," he muttered.

"Then make it a success henceforth."

Once again the low, bitter laugh left his lips, and he said in an undertone:

"What is a man to do when he is deserted, beaten back, crushed and miserably poor?"

Maisie smiled proudly.

"The young," she declared, "the young are never poor."

The words echoed through the avenues of the young man's brain as he sat at the gorgeous dinner table, and he was about to tell the girl how much her counsel had encouraged him when an episode occurred which sent him sick with horror.

In stretching forth her hand to take some fruit from the dessert dish Maisie Hope had brought down the shaded candle that stood beside her. The flame had leaped into her filmy sleeve, and, lo, already she was enveloped in fire!

Without an instant's hesitation Talbot Lake wrenched off his coat and flung it around the girl, and soon the flame was extinguished.

Maisie, terrified and well nigh on the point of fainting, was borne away to Mrs. Parker Jones' room, and a doctor was immediately summoned. He pronounced the girl's injuries trifling enough, but added that the shock might prove serious.

But fortunately the doctor's fears were not realized, for when on the following day Talbot called at her house to inquire concerning the girl's condition he was told that she was already on the point of recovery.

"Miss Hope is anxious to see you, sir," said the servant. "Will you step into the library?"

The young man followed the footman through the passage, and a moment later he stood in the handsomely furnished room. Maisie was lying on an ottoman, and she rose slightly as he entered.

"How glad I am to see you!" she said softly. "But, oh, how can I thank you for what you did last night? One cannot thank a person for saving one's life as if it was a Christmas present!"

"Then why not dispense with thanks altogether?" he said as he took her hand.

"How nicely you talk!" she said. "Now, suppose you bring up a chair close to this sofa and tell me all about yourself, for I feel sure you have had an interesting history."

There was something in her face and in her voice which wooed confidence, and a moment later Talbot found himself in the act of reciting his story, ending with the episode which had made him the fourteenth guest at the dinner party on the previous evening.

"So, you see," he continued—"you see, it was the merest chance which brought me to your side."

"A lucky chance for me," she replied, and then, changing her tone, she said softly:

"Mr. Lake, you did me a very great service, and I should like to do something for you in return. Have I your permission to speak to my father concerning you?"

Talbot's heart beat with wondrous excitement. John Hope was one of the most powerful men in London, and a word from him could achieve wonders.

"Dare I ask so much kindness?" he murmured.

"Then I shall speak to him, and he shall help you."

She kept her word, and a month later Talbot found himself appointed secretary to one of Mr. Hope's mining companies at a very considerable salary.

From that day onward fortune favored him. He embarked in a lucky speculation, which was followed by several more. The hour arrived when he was among the richest men in the financial world, and he sought out Maisie and asked her to be his wife.

"It was you who helped me to put my foot on the ladder of success," he murmured—"help me to remain there."

And Maisie, with a wonderful joy shining from her eyes, said "Yes."

A VILLAGE AUTOCRAT.

The Way He Ruled the Church of Which He Was Sexton.

Some half a century or so ago William Towne was sexton of a church in the old town of Charlton, Mass. He had a just appreciation of the dignity of his position, and so powerful was his personality that the people generally took him as seriously as he took himself.

His rule was more rigid than that of the minister, and the boy or girl who so much as changed countenance in church time felt all the force of his indignation later. From his position in the right hand rear corner, under the last window on that side, he could see everything that happened, and even the wiles of the congregation sat under penalty of reprimand or ejection.

In those days, the Springfield Republican says, "Comical Brown" used to visit Charlton every year and give a concert. One year the town hall had been burned, and he had to give his entertainment in the church of which Towne was sexton.

The church was crowded, and the humorist tried to be funny, but in vain. He sang his songs and made his jokes. Nobody smiled. Nobody laughed. He could not understand it at all, for he did not see William Towne at his post in the rear, with his elbow resting on the window sill and his eyes looking sternly around.

After the entertainment the sexton said to the humorist: "You must come again. You tickled 'em all into kinks."

"Come again?" said Brown, in astonishment. "I guess not! Once will do for me. I didn't see anybody smile or laugh or even applaud."

"Applaud! Laugh!" said Towne. "I'd like to see 'em! I'd throw 'em outdoors. I've been sexton of this church nigh on to thirty years, and they've never done it yet!"

People Who Vanish.

Among the periodic waves which strike our great centers there is none so strange as that of mysterious disappearances. Such a wave selects its victims from all classes, ages. Men, women and children are impartially its prey. Sometimes the absentees return in a dazed condition unable to tell of their whereabouts. Others present a mystery darker still, for they never return and are no more heard of. Foul play, a crazed fever for wandering, premeditated flight, are called to account as causes, but some of these mysteries have neither apparent cause nor end. It is a queer and weird feature of our modern life that these mysterious disappearances can so easily take place and their subjects be neither traced nor recovered in spite of our crowded civilization. But perhaps it is because of it.

The Swift Answer.

"Madam," said the tramp as a middle aged woman came to the door in answer to his knock, "would you give a poor man a bite to eat?"

"Why," she replied, "you are certainly able to earn a living. You don't look very old."

"Looks are often very deceitful, lady," answered the hungry hobo.

"Why, I'm old enough to be your grandfather."

And a moment later he had his feet under the kitchen table, and nothing she had in the pantry was too good for him.

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned.

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for the garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor bill of several dollars. For sale by R. H. White and Company.

GEORGE IV. NO GENTLEMAN.

He Was Told So Once, and at Another Time He Proved It.

When Lord Liverpool was forming his ministry in 1822 he thought it absolutely necessary to have Canning at the foreign office, although aware that the appointment would be obnoxious to George IV. The Duke of Wellington undertook the unpleasant task of communicating Lord Liverpool's determination.

As soon as the king knew what was wanted of him he broke out: "Arthur, it is impossible. I said, on my honor as a gentleman, he should never be one of my ministers again. I am sure you will agree with me that I cannot do what I said on my honor as a gentleman I would not do."

Another man would have been silenced, but the great soldier, always equal to an emergency, replied:

"Pardon me, sir, but I don't agree with you at all. Your majesty is not a gentleman."

The bold assertion startled the king, but the duke went on, "Your majesty is not a gentleman, but the sovereign of England, with duties to your people far above any to yourself, and these duties render it imperative that you should employ the abilities of Mr. Canning."

"Well, Arthur," said the king, drawing a long breath, "if I must, I must."

Although he did not like being told he was not a gentleman, George IV. had once, at least, while regent forgotten he was one. This was when he flung a glass of wine in Colonel Hamlyn's face, with "Hamlyn, you are a blackguard!"

The incensed officer could not resist the compliment without committing something like treason—it was out of the question to challenge the prince, while to let the insult pass unnoticed was equally impossible.

The colonel filled his glass and threw the contents in the face of his neighbor, saying, "His majesty's toast, pass it on!"

"Hamlyn," cried the regent, "you're a capital fellow! Here's your health."

And they were fast friends from that evening.

Lorrain and Nature.

By the great Italian masters landscape has been used almost entirely as a background for the figures. Claude Lorrain went a step farther, making his figures of comparatively little importance and concentrating his effort upon the ideal or heroic character of the landscape, into which he incorporated the beauty of architecture. He was a close student of nature, sketched and painted in the open air and filled his skies with sunshine. But the use that he made of nature was unnatural.—Charles H. Caffin in St. Nicholas.

He Was Attached to It.

Gilbert had been "exposed" to scarlatina, and, as he seemed listless and feverish, his mother sent for the family doctor.

"Now, my little man," the doctor said pleasantly when he had felt Gilbert's pulse, "let me see your tongue."

Gilbert put out the tip of his tongue.

"No, no," said the doctor; "put it right out—clear out."

Gilbert shook his head feebly, and tears gathered in his eyes.

"I can't get it clear way out, doctor. It's fastened on to me!"

A Story of Jean Bart, an Old Time French Naval Officer.

Jean Bart, a French naval commander of the last part of the seventeenth century, was at one time ordered to convey the Prince de Conti, a candidate for the throne of Poland, to Dantzic, a voyage fraught with danger, as his vessel must pass through the waters where were cruising the hostile fleets of the English and Dutch. During the passage the little squadron was chased by the enemy, and Bart, as soon as they were reported, called his little son to him and gave him whispered instructions. The pursuit continued for eight hours, and at the end of that time the enemy was no longer in sight. Then Bart went down into the cabin, where the prince had been sitting in ignorance of the day's excitement.

"You've had a narrow escape, monseigneur," said he.

"What do you mean?" asked the prince.

"Why," answered Bart, "that we've been chased by three eight-gun ships and nine frigates. We've run them out of sight, and there's nothing to fear."

"But, M. Bart, if they had taken us?"

"Oh, monseigneur, that was quite impossible."

"Eh! What? Why impossible?"

"Because," answered Bart, "I had stationed my brave son, my Cornil, in the gunroom with a lighted match and strict orders to put it into the powder if we should be overpowered."

"What!" cried the prince. "You would never have done such a thing?"

"Certainly I would have done it," said Bart. "It shall never be said that I allowed you to be taken when the king ordered me to take care that you were not."

Perhaps the prince himself might have preferred prosaic surrender to the doubtful glory of being blown up.

He Only Wanted the Inside.

A certain colonel's gardener was going through the woods belonging to his employer when he saw a man gathering nuts. As the colonel had given him strict orders that no one was to pick the nuts, the gardener said to the man:

"You'll have to clear out of this. I've orders to keep all these nuts for the colonel."

"It's all right," replied the man. "That's what I'm getting 'em for."

The gardener, satisfied, then passed on.

Meeting the same man a week after, he said:

"Look here! You were not getting those nuts for the colonel at all."

"I tell you I was," was the emphatic reply. "Do you think I was getting 'em for the shells? Not me."—London Mail.

The Whale.

An English schoolboy gives his views regarding the whale: "The whale is not called a fish because it is so big, so it is called a creature. They eat cockles and worms and jellies. The whales swim in shoals, and they have a tarpoon at the end of their tails, when he moves his tail, with one blow he will smash the side of the ship. It has a very big head and two fins, or flappers, off one side of its body. Fishmongers catches whales in sail them. Some people eat whales with salt and piper and bread, and some with potatoes. If you keep a whales head under water he will die for want of breath."

Survival of the Fitter.

A fitter who squeezed into a boiler at the railroad station at Crewe, England, apparently increased in size while inside, for he could not get out. The engine was obviously not of the kind known as triple expansion, and a problem of the most serious order faced the other employees. "At first it was proposed to get up steam and drive him through the safety valve in the ordinary way. His previous good character, however, and the possession of a large family secured him a reprieve. The boiler was taken to pieces, the incident ending, according to a London journal, in the "survival of the fitter."

The Truth Breaks Out.

"Now, of course, doctor," said the man upon whose eye the operation had been performed, "I respect your skill highly and all that, but doesn't it seem, even to you, a little too much to charge $50 for doing a bit of work that occupied you about five minutes?"

"My good sir," said the great oculist, hastening to the defense of himself and his profession, "you don't realize that in acquiring the skill to perform such an operation in five minutes I have spoiled perhaps two bushels of eyes quite as valuable as yours!"—New York Times.

Base Ball.

At Frankfort Wednesday and Thursday the local team was defeated by the Capital City team, by a score of 6 to 5 the first day and 8 to 7, the second, but Frankfort had to run in professionals to turn the trick. With the professionals out of the games Mt. Sterling would undoubtedly have won both.

The object of the Mothers meeting is to bring together the women and girls of Mt. Sterling that they may be inspired and encouraged to work faithfully along all the lines of peace, purity and nobility.

Took Poison.

Albert Story, of this city, took poison, it is believed, with suicidal intent, at Owingsville, and is in a critical condition.

Young Life Crushed Out.

Wm. Caywood, a farmer living near Walnut Hill Church, in Fayette county, was driving to Lexington Monday with a load of wheat. His little five-year-old daughter accompanied him, and going down a grade the wagon struck a rock throwing the little girl out. The heavily loaded wagon passed over her chest, instantly crushing out her young life.

In a lengthy statement issued by Henry E. Youtsey, the only one of the Goebel murderers to reach State's prison, he roundly scores Ex-Gov. W. S. Taylor, declaring, among other things, that he owes his downfall to the former leader of the Republican party.

Court in a Railway Car.

A short time ago when a train on the Russian railway from Tashkend stopped at Tchernaevo a well dressed man got into a carriage marked "No Smoking Allowed" and, taking out his case, began to smoke a cigarette. The other passengers politely called his attention to the fact that he was not in a smoking carriage, but he paid no heed to them and went on smoking. It so happened that one of the travelers was a justice of the peace, who thereupon got up, took his chain of office out of his bag and declared the carriage a court of law. The smoker was found guilty and fined 50 rubles, and, as he would not give his name and declared that he had no money, he was imprisoned in the guard's van until he paid the fine.

How Stories Grow.

Mrs. A. (to Mrs. B.)—That Mrs. Newcomer is so fond of her children! The other day when I called she was blowing soap bubbles with them through a common clay pipe.

Mrs. B. (to Mrs. C.)—That Mrs. Newcomer is so funny. Mrs. A. saw her amusing the children with a common clay pipe.

Mrs. C. (to Mrs. D.)—That Mrs. Newcomer smokes a common clay pipe.

Mrs. D. (to Mrs. E.)—That Mrs. Newcomer smokes a horrid pipe. I don't see how any woman in her sober senses could do that.

Mrs. E. (to Mrs. F.)—That Mrs. Newcomer smokes a pipe and drinks awfully.

Maury Military Academy,

MT. STERLING, KY.

First Session begins September 4th, 1905, and Continues Ten Months.

What is the most serious mistake in the home-training of today? Unquestionably the policy of permitting children to do as they please—too much license—unchecked and unpunished disobedience. Nothing renders a child more odious to others, especially to grown people, than early developed self-importance.

Some of the results of improper home-training are disobedience, impertinence, self-importance, conceit, discourtesy, disrespect to seniors, ungoverned temper, bad language and bad morals.

The Military School, in great measure corrects the mistakes of the parent—inculcates obedience, courtesy, good manners, good morals and respect for law—teaches a student to act promptly at first command and to do exactly as instructed—throws around him the safe guards of wholesome restraint—introduces him to neatness, precision, method and system.

Maury Military Academy does not pose as a great reformatory, but claims only to point its students to higher aims, noble aspirations and better lives.

The course of study embraces Latin, Greek, French, German, English, Mathematics, Science, History, Literature, Book-keeping, Elocution, gymnastics, Physical Culture, Primary and Military Tactics. Both sexes admitted. Undenominational. For further information or for catalogue, address

HE WANTED ENVELOPES.

Why His Request For Them Caused a Postoffice Holdup.

The pronunciation of a word caused a holdup in the line at a stamp window of the general post-office the other day. A man went up to the window and asked for two stamped "en-vel-ops," putting the accent on the last syllable. The clerk took the money and held it without making any attempt to hand out the required articles.

"Well," said the purchaser, "when do I get them?"

"Get what?" asked the clerk.

"I asked for two envelopes," again accentuating the last syllable.

"Oh, you mean two en-vel-ops," replied the clerk patronizingly, giving a vicious accent to the second syllable.

"No, I didn't mean anything of the kind," snapped the purchaser.

"Well, that's what you ought to have said, all right," the clerk observed.

"Say, what do you deal in here, stamps or pronunciation? I didn't come here to buy instruction from you."

"Why not call it ong-vel-ope and let it go at that?" said a studious looking man as he poked a penny under the glass and asked for a postal card.

"I hear that word pronounced in so many different ways in one day that it gives me the rickets," said the clerk later. "There ought to be an official postoffice order on it, as in Arkansas the legislature told the people how to pronounce the name of the state. I can stand for most any way but ong-vel-ope. That is used by people who are trying to appear Frenchified." — New York Press.

A Japanese Humorous Story.

The following is given as a typical Japanese humorous story: The term "yabu" is applied to doctors who prescribe wrong medicines. Now, it happened once that, a quack having been the means of killing the only son of a certain house, the parents determined to have their revenge on him. So they sued him at a court of law. The affair was eventually patched up by the worthy quack giving the bereaved parents his own son in return for the one he had killed. Not long after this event the said quack heard a loud knocking at his door one night. On going to the door he was informed that one of his neighbor's wives was dangerously ill and that his presence was required at once. Turning to his wife, he said: "This requires consideration, my dear. There is no knowing but that it may end in their taking you from me."

Something Lacking in the Variety.

"Hope ye've got some variety about yer show," said the manager of the Plunkville Grand Opera House as he laboriously affixed his signature to the contract.

"Lots of it," replied the gentlemanly advance agent. "Our performance comprises circus, comic opera, ballet, vaudeville, comedy, concert, grand opera, minstrels, tragedy, drama, pantomime and extravaganza."

The local manager looked disappointed.

"Hain't ye got no mind reader ner hypnotic perfesser?" he inquired.—Pittsburg Post.

The Doctor's Retort.

In connection with lawyers trying to confuse experts in the witness box in murder trials a case is recalled where the lawyer looked quizzically at the doctor who was testifying and said:

"Doctors sometimes make mistakes, don't they?"

"The same as lawyers," was the reply.

"But doctors' mistakes are buried six feet under ground," said the lawyer.

"Yes," said the doctor, "and lawyers' mistakes sometimes swing in the air."

Economy.

Many years ago when stoves were first beginning to take the place of open grates the daughter of a rich but rather close and eccentric old Philadelphia Quaker urged him to purchase a stove in order to keep up with the times. But the old man was obdurate in adhering to the grate.

"Why, father," argued his daughter, "a stove will save half of the fuel."

"Very well, then," replied the wily old Quaker. "We had better buy two stoves and save it all."

The Coming Sorrow.

The London Tatler tells of a lady who, on the way back from her husband's funeral, called with a few sympathetic friends at a house of refreshment. Gin was fixed upon as a beverage suitable to the occasion. "Any water with yours, Em?" inquired one of the ladies of the widow as she held out the jug. "Water!" shrieked the bereaved one. "Water! Lor' lumme! Ain't I got trouble enough as it is?"

Cure For The Blues

ONE MEDICINE THAT HAS NEVER FAILED

Health Fully Restored and the Joy of Life Regained

When a cheerful, brave, light-hearted woman is suddenly plunged into that perfection of misery, the BLUES, it is a sad picture. It is usually this way: She has been feeling "out of sorts" for some time; head has ached and back also; has slept poorly, been quite nervous, and nearly fainted once or twice; head dizzy, and heart-beats very fast; then that bearing-down feeling, and during her menstrual period she is exceedingly despondent. Nothing pleases her. Her doctor says: "Cheer up; you have dyspepsia; you will be all right soon."

But she doesn't get "all right," and hope vanishes; then come the brooding, morbid, melancholy, everlasting BLUES.

Don't wait until your sufferings have driven you to despair, with your nerves all shattered and your courage gone, but take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. See what it did for Mrs. Rosa Adams, of 819 12th Street, Louisville, Ky., niece of the late General Roger Hanson, C.S.A. She writes: Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I cannot tell you with pen and ink what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered with female troubles, extreme lassitude, 'the blues,' nervousness and that all-gone feeling. I was advised to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it not only cured my female derangement, but it has restored me to perfect health and strength. The buoyancy of my younger days has returned, and I do not suffer longer with despondency, as I did before. I consider Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a boon to sick and suffering women."

If you have some derangement of the female organism write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for advice.
